"THE MUNSTERS"

The Munsters are a musical family. Grandpa, the old maestro, claims to have given Nero fiddle lessons, but nobody believes he's quite that old. As for teaching Bach the organ, at least there's some evidence: the family still has the organ. They play the harp divinely. They should, it comes supernaturally to them. But it's as a combo that the Munsters stand out. Available for wakes, they put the fun in funeral. When they play, everyone gets the urge to dirge.

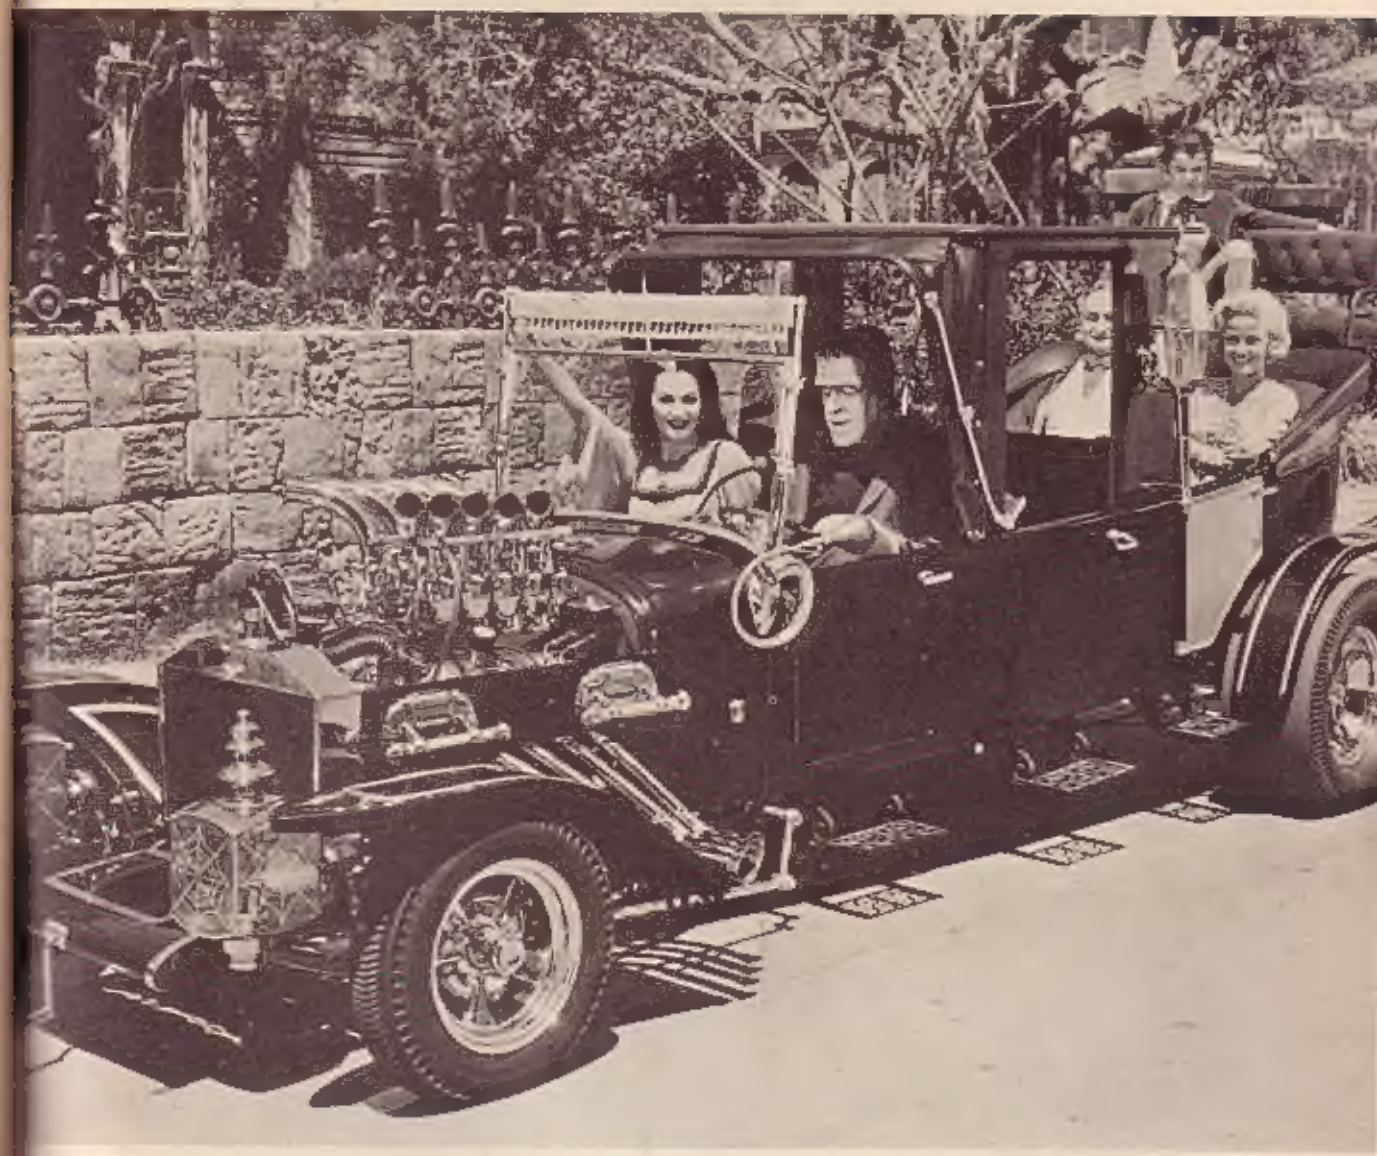
"THE MUNSTERS"



One thing you've got to say for Herman Munster, he's a practical man; no new model car for him every year. The one he has is perfectly sound. It will get him there and bring him back. Herman fell in love with it the first ride he took. That was before it was converted into a passenger car. Before, it only had to get him there—he wasn't coming back! When Herman dug it up, everyone said it had made its last ride. But Herman knew better; after all, they were saying the same thing about him, too. And the price was dirt cheap.
